

There's nothing good about it!

It's important to remember that ageing is a natural part of your dog's life. And as your dog ages, they may begin to act differently. Ageing takes a toll on a dog's entire body, including their brain.

This may lead to behavioural changes such as:

- House-soiling accidents
- No longer "asks" to go outside
- Does not greet family members
- Does not want attention/petting
- Does not recognize familiar people or places
- Does not respond to verbal cues
- Sleeps more during the day or less at night
- Appears lost or confused in the house or yard
- Wanders or paces
- Stares into space or at walls

To keep your dog acting young and healthy, proper nutrition is vital. As your pet ages, continue to feed them foods rich in antioxidants and essential nutrients to keep them active and alert. For an accurate diagnosis and treatment options, always consult your veterinarian.

Slowing down can also be a result of mobility and joint health issues. They can keep the pet you love from feeling good and limit the special times you enjoy together. Precisely balanced nutrition could help to make a life-changing difference, and we are happy to advise our clients on how to help your aging pet.

Don't forget regular vet checks for your best friend as they age ó Dogs age faster than us, so going to the vet just once each year is the same as your grandma going to the doctor once every four years!

Kind Regards,
Scott and Chris
